Signpost, (2007 – 2015) a public sculpture by Australian artist, Stuart Ringholt facilitates an encounter with its environment that explores emotions. Concurrent with his participation in PERFORMA 15 and his solo exhibition at OSMOS Address, Ringholt installed Signpost in the park located at 33 East 1st Street, at the intersection of Houston Street, 2nd Avenue and East First Street in Manhattan. This installation is part of an ongoing arts programming collaboration of OSMOS and FIRST STREET GREEN with support from City of New York Parks and Recreation.

Combining deadpan earnestness with slapstick humor and a fascination with the absurd, Stuart Ringholt's work takes many forms, from performance, video, and sculpture to collaborative workshops and public encounters.

OSMOS Address is a project space for art gatherings, publications, and exhibitions in the East Village storefront that was once a saloon frequented by Emma Goldman and other radicals. OSMOS has established itself as an international platform for the exchange of ideas and images.
